

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

and gave the spring to the spirit, firmness and resolution of the fellow-champions. They roared as one man to revenge the blood of the slain. The point of the sword to assert and defend their national rights. They nobly dared to be consistent with the long, bloody and patriotic. Righteous heaven approved the solemn appeal. "Victory crowned their arms and the peace, liberty and independence of the United States of America was a glorious reward," built in the year 1788.

On a stone slabe lying at the base of the monument is the following inscription:—"The remains of those who fell the battle of Lexington were brought down from the old cemetery April 20th, 1833, and buried within the railing in the rear of this monument." Size of monument, base 3 1/2 feet, 3 feet high, then a slate stone cap 26 1/2" x 50", 15 inches thick, set 5 1/2" to 10" feet high, in shape of solid granite, on top of shaft is a cap of slate stone, which projects a foot all sides. Then a granite slab 15" x 15" x 15" in the center, and the whole is enclosed by an iron fence. The sides of the monument are covered with woodbine up to the cap.

On the opposite side of the Elm avenue on the corner of the street is the old military church in 1838. On the avenue just west of the old military church is the right, corner of Hancock street and the avenue, is the 1st Orthodox church, not the 2d Orthodox church, is the 1st Orthodox church, on Main street about half way up the avenue, the 2d Orthodox society are building a fine stone church, estimated at $25,000. On the avenue at the head of the street, is the old military church, Harrington. Inscription on the house is "Jonathan Harrington wounded on the 19th of April 1775, he thrust himself to the door and died at his wife's feet." The house is an old fashioned New England style, built in 1747. In front stand two stone set out in 1748. There are some old trees in the yard, and the house has very large spreading tops.

Mr. Benjamin K. Brown, a deaf mute residing in Melrose, Mass., was struck by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock, and was struck by the engine before the train could be stopped, and he was killed. His body was taken to the Melrose Mass. General Hospital, and he was buried in the cemetery at 6 a. m., Dec. 31st. Mr. Brown was born in Hartford, Jan. 7th, 1838, and was a deaf mute. He attended the school for deaf mutes where he remained four years, receiving a good education. He was married to Mrs. Lawrence, Mass., where he was employed as wool sorter in the Washington Woolen Co. He was killed by the 140 ton train on the B. & W. R. at 11 o'clock on Monday morning, April 20th, 1893, he was going to his work Monday morning, Dec. 30th. He started to cross the track at 11 o'clock

[illegible]

VERTISER

WEEK.

My Wife!

HARD.

STORY!

and thrombosis."

the opening finished free

MILLIA.

of the Ben of officers,
day evening,
Officers were Commander
nder, Tobias
der, Wilson
vid P. Lane;
rmaster, E.
Lish; Sur-
cer of the d John Gil-
th; Quar-rell. After telling of the
an interested recitation

Look out!
Association
programme

MILLIA.

ee and Ac-install its offices to
There will Officers elect
E. Carroll,
G. W. Block-
S. J. Skil-
et al., D.
ussels Soap!
uld have re-
ace: G.
Morey, his
g. All are

ch stood so orn down ng it into a

of the imitated the start-
over 40 per-its less than is sold for ar at 3 cents

wards was father and nome sick.

MILLIA.

r to utilize the buzz-
g's mill.
n town last
new year.
phyied two appreciative hall. This in this vicin-

Greene and Cutter Hotel
ing.

Look out! s attending
unmy, speak s Dr. Wil-

assing the riends and rist mill in s from the

in this State, ntions of the ared on the

Cambridge

VITA.

ing men-eve-
ous
indirections
e good hours,
that never ap-
le will cure

tate of the mna, the satisfactory
concerned.
very danger-
that "blows
ppe is giv-
o sit three can hardly n we were

Wera.

es for three after trying
P. I decided light bottles
oro i cheer-
testimonials
uccess of S. terling from
A.M.B.
F's Mill, Ga.

aken from a
am McKain,
at Tal-
"While I
e's Bend, In 87 and 88, I Pa Specific
e every one lond in its ere benefit-
nce dead-
malignant
fortune in!
ithout suc-
been used aid left in healing. I
s. S. S. and he re-
that time
veral years,
never re-

Years.

nd entirely
by by taking
le (S.S.S.)
of it since
xx.

urg, S. C.
Diseases,
Alants, Ga.

